Udaipur: T-24 also known as Ustad, the big cat from Ranthambore wilds is completely stress free and healthy though he's not yet ready to face human glares.

The 9-year-old majestic animal was shifted on May 17 at Sajjangarh Biological Park here and after 6 months of stay now, the committee constituted to monitor his wellness affirmed a positive report of the acclimatization process, claimed Rahul Bhatnagar, the chief conservator of forest.

Tourists visiting in large numbers from far and wide are curious to know about T-24 however, people will have to wait for some more time since the forest department is not yet sure whether Ustad could be shifted in the public display area. Presently the beast is caged in a secluded area of the park where entry for the park employees is also restricted. Except for the caretaker and to go near Ustad's cage as he exhibits his displeasure on seeing intruders, park sources informed. To prevent him from injuries, the tiger is kept protected by putting visual barriers all over the cage. Green and yellow colored net covers the area so that the beast doesn't harm himself by hitting against the cage walls in case of irritation and anger.

"The medical team has regularly been monitoring his dietintake and the leftovers next day which have been found to be absolutely normal" Bhatnagar said. The tiger is kept under CCTV surveillance.

The tiger was banished from Ranthambore sanctuary for allegedly have killed four people in five years. Foresters had believed that the beast had become very bold and lost shyness of human beings and hence, it was dangerous to allow it a free run in the wild.

Mangarh Dham to be developed: CM

Jaipur: In its bid to keep the BJP's tribal vote base intact, chief minister Vasundhara Raje on Tuesday said that the government will chalk out a master plan for development of Mangarh Dham in Banswara district, where around 1,500 tribals were massacred by the British in 1913.

She said the government will develop the Mangarh Dham as a pilgrimage site. She was addressing a large gathering of followers of tribal leader Govind Guru at the Mangarh Dham, which is located at the border of Gujarat, Madhya Pradesh and Rajasthan. Guru had led the tribal uprising against the British on November 17, 1913.

While paying tribute to the martyrs, she said, "The government will coordinate with Gujarat and Madhya Pradesh, and develop a master plan for the area that will be implemented in a time-bound manner." She said efforts would be made to set up a national museum at Mangarh Dham. On the occasion, she announced installing a grand statue of martyr Govind Guru, widening of the 5 km approach road to Mangarh Dham and development of other facilities. Union minister of state for rural development Sudarshan Bhag at and Union minister of state for tribal affairs Mansukhbhai Vasava, tribal affairs minister Nandlal Meena and state home minister Gulab Chand Kataria among others paid tributes to the martyrs.

Politically, the tribal areas in south Rajasthan known as Mewar, are crucial. The area accounts for 28 seats spread over six districts in Udaipur divisionUdaipur, Banswara, Dungarpur, Pratapgarh, Rajsamand and Chittorgarh. In the 2013 assembly elections, the BJP successfully managed to woo tribal voters away from the Congress, winning 25 of 28 seats. In 2008, it was the Congress that bagged 20 seats while in 2003, BJP had won 22 seats. Traditionally the tribals have been Congress voters mainly due to welfare schemes and lack of development. The area is picturesque, with lush greenery, ample water and ghats but is backward and issues of employment and development dominate.
