Portugal is new Euro champs

Paris: Portugal overcame the loss of injured captain Cristiano Ronaldo to beat France 1-0 in the European Championship final on Sunday, with a goal in extra time from substitute Eder securing their country's first football title. Just as the final looked destined for a penalty shootout, Eder cut through the French defence and struck a low shot from 25 metres (yards) past goalkeeper Hugo Lloris in the 109th minute at the Stade de France.

Twelve years after losing to Greece on home soil in their last final appearance, it was Portugal's turn to spoil the host nation's party. And they achieved it by winning only one of their seven games at Euro 2016 inside 90 minutes. It was dull and stodgy at times but the record books will only show that Portugal went from third-place in its group to champion, with little help from Ronaldo in its last match. European football's biggest match lost its biggest name midway through the first half of a cagey final on the outskirts of the French capital. Ronaldo went down under

Dimitri Payet's ninth-minute challenge and was twice forced off to receive treatment on the touchline. However determined Ronaldo was to lead Portugal to glory, his left knee could cope no more and he was carried off on a stretcher midway through the first half. Ronaldo was in tears but he returned just before extra time to address his weary teammates. They seemed to be inspired by Ronaldo's re-emergence and the Real Madrid forward was soon leaping off the bench in celebrations. Then he was lying on the turf again at the final whistle, this time in disbelief rather than pain. (Courtesy AP)

JRNU Second In Patent Applications

Udaipur: Janardhan Rai Nagar Rajasthan Vidyapeeth had been ranked second amongst universities and educational institutions in for filing patent applications

As per the latest annual report (2014-15) released from the Office of Controller General of Patents, Design, Trademark and Geographical Indications, JRNVU ranks second with a total of 53 applications that have been filed for patent. It ranks behind the IITs (combined) that have a total of 337 applications filed for patent. Interestingly, JRNVU ranks above the prestigious Indian Institute of Sciences (IISc).

Vice Chancellor, Prof SS Sarangdevot said that this ranking is a result of aggressive push over the last four years to focus on innovative research. He said that focus will now shift towards international patent filing for which a multi-dimensional strategy would be designed.

Udaipur to soon turn signal-less

Udaipur: Moving ahead with its strategy to ease traffic congestion in the udaipur eventually making it signal-free, DM and his team will now be replicating at the busy Hathipol circle an innovative model that proved successful in the prominent Surajpol intersection. The system, which runs on a design where street edges in the close vicinity of a roundabout are defined by spaces designated for street vendors and pedestrians along with vehicles including cycles, also seeks to provide proper parking space in the area. Last month, the plan was first launched at Hathipol, where 11 of days of consistent implementation saw the arterial circle acquiring smooth traffic with far less manpower to handle the vehicle flow. "What's more, the project design has also led to slowing of vehicle speed at the junction," a top municipal official pointed out.

Soon, the model will be experimented at Hathipol, official said, noting that the idea basically was to make Udaipur the first in Rajasthan to become signal-free. "If it gives us success in easing traffic at Hathipol as well, we will go on to implement the project at all the circles of the city," he added.

Today, amid traffic congestion worsened by haphazard parking of vehicles, Surajpol, which typically used to need no less than eight traffic policemen, now stands as a breezy stretch of vehicle movement channelled by a couple of constables.

Initially, the traffic department had installed barricades at the circle to let people know about the design and instructed its police to educate the public about the benefits of following the pattern.
