Might of Milatary

Uri attack was not the only or first attack done in a coward manner by terrorists but this time people had eyes on government which is in power for a change. Initial quiet across the powered political class raised the tension and tough talks across the national discourse. The media while began analyzing why we can cannot attack and what could be PM's problems in dealing with the attack head on, people started to give up hopes that any action would be taken. Then broke the news of the surgical strike across the border which reduced more than 40 terrorists who were reportedly planning to attack or intrude the country to ashes. The might of military was showcased.

And that too in style. It was a clinical operation and with 100 percent success. While government was able to shine like a star, the opposition too came in support. What we normally see in India-Pak matches was evident and visible across the nation. One voice, one sentiment, and one reaction sent message not only across the border but throughout the world that it takes no time for Indians to become one when it comes to their national pride. Be it social media or political opposition, every one praised the strategic act by army with inspiration and support from Indian Prime Minister, Defense Minister, Army Chief, Home Minister, and National Security Advisor.

The Uri attack obviously left the nation divided in many sections as many wanted immediate strike while others advocated for a war. Some blamed government and some rested hopes against government that something will happen. These surgical strikes have given a great faith to the Indians that the Army is all set and will not remain quite in response to any unwanted act by the terrorists. This also has given shock to the terrorists supporting organizations who until now had firm conviction that India can only do "Kadi Ninda" and cry foul on International forum. The image of peace loving India was such that it will not take any action whether provoked by blasts or conspiracies. But now, the terrorist organization will have to ponder before they plan any retaliation. Now they know that counter attack will be there which means it will be a war between terror organizations and Indian forces. Indian forces can use any means to retaliate and kill culprits and still earn sympathy and maintain its place in good books of the rest of the world.
