

Constitution Do you Know it?

Prashant Shrivastava

As we celebrate the 70th republic day in 2019, its also the right to ask a very basic question—how many of us are aware of our constitution.

The general answer may be in affirmation but deep down we know, we are not much educated about our constitution. Agree that there are many chapters about civic studies in the school, but there must be a concentrated effort to impart the knowledge of constitution to the kids, youth, and even women. When you know the law, you not only stay clear of any unwanted imbroglios, but you also cannot be fooled. For example, you know that not wearing a helmet or seat-belt is illegal and could attract a penalty, but you also need to know the exact punishment and means of penalty. Recently, the Delhi government has announced regular constitution classes in government schools. This and such efforts are needed in every state of the country. A country's power lies in educated and aware citizen.

And this is the responsibility of everyone. You cannot shrug off and put the blame on system. You can make some effort, and you will easily find a credible source from where you can learn about your responsibilities and duties along with rights.

This, of course is a two-way idea of life. You enjoy rights and you perform your duties. That way, you earn your rights. Just like you grow your own oxygen when you plant a sapling and nurture it forever. The first step of course would need you to educate yourself. And when you are ready, you can share the knowledge with family and friends.

It will be like a matter of pride if you are aware of your constitution. It empowers you and updates you with the duties you must perform. Freedom, of course is a valuable gift our ancestors have given us. That was one step.

The other, and probably the perennial step would be maintaining and protecting it. And you cannot protect a rule that you are not aware of.

It's time to extend the education to a level where each one of us can help the country propel towards prosperity.

Namo vichar Manch's new Initiative

Give the constitution in place of envelopes or gifts. Udaipur Governments have the moral responsibility of transferring the copy of the Constitution to every citizen. Only the power of the constitution can give the citizens their rights.

Thinking about this, senior citizens and youth of Udaipur took oath on Republic Day that they would give a copy of Indian Constitution of India on marriage, birthdays and festivals, instead of envelopes and gifts.

The program 'Fundamentals of Constitution' discusses the fundamental rights of the citizens.

Due to lack of awareness, Indians often forgets their rights And the system keeps on exploiting them.

In the program, Pravin Ratalia, State President of Namo vichar Manch, Udaipur, was present along with GyanPrakashSoni, Mahesh Sharma, Shantilal Mehta, and Ramesh Chandra Panwar. NareshChaudhary, Raj Singh Rathod, Suresh Nagda and Bhubaneswar Ojha were awarded the copy of the constitution for outstanding work.

New Initiative - Praveen Ratalia gifted copy of Indian constitution to the groom GovindSoni at the marriage ceremony in front of the samor bag garden, as a gift and said that the constitution was introduced on the day itself.

It is the duty of every citizen to respect it..
