The first month of the year 2020 is about to end and with that, the countdown for the final exams in an academic institution has begun.

But you can only afford to revise what you have already covered in the past 10 months. If you still have lessons untouched, it would be a real risk to take them up.

Now, the key is revision. And you can revise what you have already covered and nothing new. And when you revise, keep an eye on the previous years' papers.

Editorial

The key to success is being smart. Pay more attention to the chapters that are high scoring. Some questions, with little effort, can give you 20 marks while others, even collectively might weigh only 10-12 marks.

Now, there are some key facts and formulas that you must learn by heart in order to solve any problem or derive any algorithm. So, pick those and put them on the wall so that you see them every time you see the wall.

"Coronary Blockage Can Now Be Treated with Shockwave"

First-ever in India in real-world scenario, three cases of heavily calcified coronary arteries were successfully intervened using "Trans Radial Intravascular Lithotripsy" (Shockwave IVL) at CIMS Hospital Ahmedabad on Jan 13th 2020

Udaipur/Chittorgarh: Shockwave Intravascular Lithotripsy for managing the challenging calcium buildup in coronary arteries arrived in India last week after a long wait for improvising patient outcomes on approval by the Drug Controller General of India (DCGI).

The Shockwave Intravascular Lithotripsy uses acoustic sonic waves and the principle of lithotripsy which is created on extremely low pressures to address the most challenging calcium buildups.

The first 3 consecutive Transradial cases of Shockwave Intravascular Lithotripsy of India were carried out on 13th January 2020 at CIMS Hospital, Ahmedabad.

DrKeyur Parikh, DrTejas V. Patel and the CIMS Cardiology team of specialists watched over this groundbreaking procedure to its success.

The shockwave is administered by pressing the button of a unique pulse generator which is attached to the console of the system in just 30-40 seconds.

The safe device allows challenging the calcium with a few presses of the button.

"The Shockwave Intravascular Lithotripsy is truly groundbreaking, and we are proud of the fact that these three were the first cases of transradial shockwave therapy in India. The conventional balloons had failed even at extremely high pressures in these three cases and one of three patients had been waiting for over a year for preferential treatment to address the challenging calcium in his coronary arteries," said DrKeyur Parikh.

"In complex cases, the calcium residing for years or decades in coronary arteries does not let the conventional balloons to dilate the lesion, and this leads to unsatisfactory results in angioplasties performed.

With the advent of shockwave, the most complex lesions with hard calcium can be handled in a much simpler way with least rates of adverse events," said DrTejas V Patel.

With the advent of SHOCKWAVE the most complex lesions with hard calcium can be handled in a much simpler way. This simple technique of lithotripsy ensures the lower risk of adverse events which includes perforations/dissections compared to conventional techniques.
