

Udaipur Media Awards Conferred

With the development of the city of Udaipur, please pay attention to its heritage as well: Sandeep Purohit

Udaipur: The media award 2020 was organized at Bhairav Bagh in Udaipur on Saturday night. The event was sponsored by Arth Diagnostic, Prompt Infracom, RBS Foundation, JSG Lakecity Youth Forum, and Journalists Association of Rajasthan (JAR) Udaipur.

Sandeep Purohit, the local editor of Rajasthan Patrika, said that I did not want to come to this city, I came to this city and saw a lot in a short time which did not appear anywhere else. This city is lovely and unique in its way. Here, there is no coordination between journalists and the calamity and pull that is seen everywhere. He said that with the development of the city, people here should pay attention to its heritage.

No one is going to see the big poll. Pichola, Fatehsagar and small narrow streets will come to see. No matter how many beautiful colonies you make, no one will come to see them.

Only small chow pads, big chow pads come to see in Jaipur. Jaipur later settled on that heritage city while Udaipur is not a heritage city. Is there a temple of Eklingji like Udaipur in Jaipur, a temple-like Jagdish. If I do not come to Udaipur I would have made a mistake. Let us all decide as a pledge that we will declare it as a heritage city.

Dr. Arvinder Singh, Director of Arth Diagnostic, said that the media has a great responsibility to analyze any news or event which is in black form over the white, people take great responsibility and confidence in it.

At the outset of the ceremony, Syed Tabrej Ali of Prompt Infracom, while welcoming everyone, highlighted the outline of the program. Convenor Alpesh Lodha announced the second edition of the Media Award.

India Against Road crash campaign

Udaipur: A day-workshop of child corps and autorickshaw drivers to control road accidents and bring future school children of India was organized. The purpose of this campaign was to inform the child vehicle operators about safe driving, traffic rules, measurement of a school bus, etc.

Adhar Foundation's Narayan Choudhary said that the driving on Indian roads is hazardous, most people in India consider road accidents to be an unfortunate incident. At the same time, it is a tragedy arising out of not following safety and alert rules. People rely on superstitions like Nibu Mirchi and Black Cat to avoid accidents, instead of careful and safe walking on the roads, which is wrong. At the same time, the most important responsibility is that of child bus drivers carrying children. CPS The director of Smt. Alka Sharma said that there are many reasons for the road accident, but the solution is the same, that we will change only then the country will improve and the rate of accidents will decrease.

The chief guest of the program was Udaipur Automobile Dealers Association President Roshan Lal Ji Jain and Vice-Chairman Shabbir Mustafa, who administered the oath of safe road, safe vehicle, safe road users to all.

Principal Mrs. Poonam Rathore highlighted all the activities being conducted in the school through Road Safety Club and supported all possible support from the school administration to reduce the rate of accidents.

BIRD FESTIVAL IN UDAIPUR

Who doesn't love birds with their hued multi feathers and different shapes and sizes of their body, flying high in the azure sky, perched on branches of trees, swimming effortlessly on the lustrous still water of the lakes or diving deep into the water in search of their prey? The alluring sight of these beautiful avians, one of God's most attractive gifts to man, always gladdens one's mind and soul.

Well, known all over the world is the historical past and rich culture of Mewar. The exquisite sculpture and folk traditions are unique. In addition to all this, it is a favorite region for resident and migratory birds. Out of 24 essential bird areas in the state, there are six in the Udaipur district. About 150 species of migratory birds in huge numbers visit the lakes of Udaipur and the neighboring regions during the winter season.

To acquaint Udaipurites with different species of birds, the importance of avians in the eco-system, and the need for protecting them, especially the endangered species, the forest department of Udaipur has been organizing bird festival for the last six years.

Inaugurating the festival Forest and Environment State Minister Sukhram Bishnoi said that we could learn a lot from the lifestyle of birds, and they can also warn us about coming disasters like earthquakes. They also help us in balancing the eco-system, so it is essential to protect them. In the opinion of Dr. Ravi Singh, WWF, the presence of a large number of birds shows the high quality of human life in the area.

In the bird watching season at Fatehsagar and Sanjay Park, about 900 students and other guests were given information about 20 Birds species.

About 550 participants painted beautiful pictures of various aspects of avians life, and about 370 students took part in the quiz organized by WWF. A large number of persons attended the photography workshop to learn the art of shooting birds with cameras.

The exhibition of 10,000 stamps on birds from 330 countries and coins on birds issued by over 25 countries were a big attraction of the Festival. So also a collection of match boxes with pictures of a bird's and a live demo of the life cycle of 6 species of butterflies was highly appreciated.

In Nature Literature Festival books related to wildlife, especially birds, were released. Writers like noted environment specialists Sunayan Sharma, Rajpal Singh, and Dr. Dharmendra Khandal talked about their books in detail. Their presentation was followed by searching questions by noted anchor Swati Agarwal. Quite a few fascinating facts that were revealed. The age of Saras crane is between 80 to 90 years. 90% of them live outside the protected area. Most of them are found in rice fields of UP and Rajasthan; they live mostly in marshy areas. There is such bonding between them and the farmers that the latter leaves some area for breeding of these birds for 3 to 4 months. The looks of males and females of the species are so similar that it is not easy to distinguish between the two. In two months, their heights rise to 5 feet. There are four kinds of weaver birds in India. They are gregarious in all the seasons. Out of 4 species of weaver birds that are found in India, males and females of 3 change their color during breeding season lack of food and poor management decisions are two main reasons for the death of Tigers. A recently discovered new phenomenon is that when a female Tiger dies, the male one also nurses the cubs.

As part of the bird race competition, the teams toured different areas from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. they sited several bird species and took their photos as part of documentation. The teams that recorded the highest number of species got prizes. One aim of these programs was to create awareness about the protection of birds. In fact, a large number of villages have not only become aware of this themselves but also trying to make others aware they do not allow fishing and undesirable activities near the lakes are doing a lot to save birds and provide information about them to the visitors. A mentally ill woman was found collecting plastics and garbage from the village and depositing it all in one place. She seemed to be more sensible than even the educated urban population.

Addressing the closing session of the festival, Ashok Chandana youth and Sports Minister emphasized the important role of the public in the preservation of the forest. He stressed the need to maintain eco-balance, presenting a report of the Festival Chandra Pal Singh, ACF, said that the event was a big success and bird lover from Rajasthan and outside had participated in it with enthusiasm. R.K. Singh, CCF said that it was imperative to protect birds as species once lost cannot be reclaimed expert committees should take proactive action. He proposed to hold a workshop to determine the status of rare birds and to expand the website to create awareness. Dr. N.C. Jain highlighted the problems in shaving birds and some measures to protect them. He said that NGO's locals and researchers have an important role in saving birds.

Ravi Singh, National President WWF, said that wetlands were the lifeline of our culture, and we should focus on two wetlands every year. He added that WWF would support Ph.D. researchers. Awareness should be created through Eco-tracking Dr. Satish Sharma, who conducted the program, said that such festivals inspire the youth to save the lakes and birds and compete with other villages in doing so the winners of different competitions were given prizes.

Dr. Satish Sharma, Dr. Pankaj Sen, and Dr. Vijay Kohli were honored for imparting training in bird watching. Also honored were Veena Dave, Sharad Agarwal, and Dr. Ram Meghwal.

Forest guard Satnam Singh who had tranquilized over 100 animals and had been severely wounded several times, was also honored. The three-day Fest was a big success and got an enthusiastic response from a large number of bird lovers of Udaipur and outside.

Who owns the lakes of Udaipur?

Lakes are the identity of Udaipur. They present an experience which people carry with them as they return from Udaipur. The interconnected water bodies and the downstream lakes and ponds from Fatehsagar to Udaisar and right up to Bisalpur make a system of preservation of rain water which has been working as a life line for Rajasthan. People of Udaipur harbor an emotional bond with the lakes.

Who will be responsible for the cleanliness of water? Who will decide how much load of the tourist-traffic the lakes will be able to bear?

Who will safeguard the historical structure of the lakes and medieval buildings situated in and around the lakes?

The Municipal Corporation itself is getting a cruise constructed to be floated in the lakes. Has anybody thought whether the lakes of Udaipur have the potential to sustain this huge structure? Will it not be proper to put it in Jaisamand rather than smaller lakes like Fateh Sagar or Pichola? The tendency these days is to organize a number of events on the Barrage of lake Fatehsagar.

But in recent years the big hoteliers have, it seems captured the lakes in their commercial interest. The maximum number of boats running into the lake Pichola is owned by the hotels Lake Palace, Leela Residency and many others. Jag Mandir has become a hot marriage destination for the rich capitalists and the political leaders. The common man of Udaipur is just surprised at the way these places of natural beauty are converted into money making machines.

There is a question which nobody asks? Who owns the lakes of Udaipur? Are they property of the people? Are they property of the state? Are they property of the hoteliers? Are they property of the erstwhile dynasty of Mewar represented by Mahendra Singh and Arvind Singh? Are they property of UIT? Are they property of Municipal Corporation? These are questions which are not easy to answer.

They need to be answered because the answer to these questions will fix the responsibility of their conservation. Who will fix the number of boats to be allowed in a particular lake? Who will see that human interference does not affect the bio diversity of the

This is done by government bodies as well as by NGOs and private individuals and groups. This tendency is not good for the lakes. The need is to decentralize such activities like "Run for ...", candle marches, noisy musical programmes etc. Flower shows, nature watch and similar activities are all right but one should rethink before making it an off-crowded place. Lakes are not just the property of human beings. They are home of several species of birds, amphibians, fish and other species of animals and plants.

The rich biodiversity of the ecosystem needs to be tended and conserved.

As human beings it is our responsibility to protect and look after the well being of other creatures on the surface of the earth. Long before the market driven economy set in Gandhiji had said that the earth has enough to fulfill the needs of every one but does not have enough to fulfill the greed of a single individual.
