Udaipur News & More...

Too much social?

here was a time when people could stay in touch with friends and relatives through snail mail and occasional trunk calls. The telegram used to serve as an emergency measure for special occasions like emergency or good news

Then, the age came when people got really busy and interactions took a back seat. It was the time when new means of connecting like emails were settling in.

Now, ever since, the instant messaging has come, the distance again seems to be reduced, drastically. Today, you can find an old childhood friend and get connected through groups and chats. It has been all fine. But then, we saw business usage of social media. Marketing companies started sending you random messages and then came the carefully crafted targeted-audience marketing. Companies do research about you and then offer you the products that you would be likely to buy. It still was a great way and a win-win situation for buyers and sellers.

Editorial

Then came the political class on social media and instant messaging. And suddenly the outrage against each other became the trend. Friends turned foes for opposing each others' political ideology. Some even broke up with their close friends for just supporting a party that they did not like. The hatred is all over today. We have one or other elections every six months and thus the politically motivated hatred has become a part of life. From truth to fake pictures, everything is there on social media. The content that spreads hatred is produced systematically and is circulated as breaking news. This hatred is playing on minds and people look more tensed and feel pressurized if their favorite political party fails to win. Among the friends, they feel ashamed and low for actually no fault of theirs. And this is all on a propagated perception, which is generally far from the truth. This is never stopping. In fact, people are facing huge outrage if they support or oppose a particular issue on social media. Come on it is their fundamental right to express a concern. If we are looking to make a country where only powerful people would be allowed to speak, we are going to lose a lot. The very idea of keeping the voting secret is now losing fast. As a countryman, your idea should support the right thing in favor of the country. If you have an opinion, voice it out but do respect others' views too. And try to remain neutral when you are with friends or relatives. Your relationship is more important than your opinion about a political figure whom you only know a bit. Vote for the right party by using logical reasoning and not emotional reasons. Use your social media with the utmost care and take a pledge to be sensitive and cool.

Lecture on need for Biodiversity Conservation

Udaipur: A program on Loss of Biodiversity: Causes, Consequences and Conservation Strategies was organized on Saturday, 25 January, 2020 by Inter-Disciplinary Education Association of Govt. Meera Girls College, Udaipur for Faculty members as well as students. Main Speaker Dr. Vartika Jain, Assistant Professor of Department of Botany, Govt. Meera Girls' College, spoke that biodiversity consists of each and every living species on the earth. But due to some natural causes and majorly manmade causes such as pollution, excessive consumption of natural resources, poaching, habitat degradation etc. biodiversity is being lost

at an alarming rate and therefore, there is an urgent need to conserve biodiversity as its loss will negatively impact human existence.

She emphasized on strategies being employed at National and International levels for biodiversity conservation and role of mankind. Dr. Jain shown the efforts of Botany department of MG College in doing ex situ conservation by planting Rashi Vatika as well as rare and endangered plant species in the College. Program was presided by Dr. Shashi Sanchihar, who motivated students to do little efforts to conserve biodiversity by planting a tree or even saying no to plastic materials IDFA coordinator Dr. Shivani Swarnakar gave thanks to Dr. Vartika and toldstudents to take a single pledge to conserve biodiversity as their contribution.Program was conducted with help of Dr. Anju Beniwal and Dr. Sheiba Haider. dances, music and beautiful costumes of people. But the question is whether this plurality and diversity is not threatened by a spree of sweeping generalizations.

The parade on the republic day also shows the military strength of our country. New defense procurements and stories of the bravery of our forces are showcased before the world. No wonder the forces mesmerize us by their display of strength and military skills.

The republic day is also an occasion to develop friendly relations with our neighboring countries. In the past heads of the states of neighboring countries were invited to be quests in the celebrations ebrated amidst a revived Greetings were also interest in the constitution exchanged with nations of of India. Never before was the world. Such practices the preamble of constitution need to be continued and read collectively at so many people to people contact places and by so many peobetween neighboring counple together. It seems India tries needs to be increased is trying to redeem its so that goodwill is created strength by the collective between nations. reading of the constitution

On the occasion of 71st republic day of India it is necessary to take a pledge to strengthen the institutions of our country including legislature, executive and the judiciary. It is also necessary to strengthen the public sector of our country which has been the backbone of our economy. It is also necessary to rethink the policies of agriculture and education so that the country ensures a steady development and develops a harmony for long lasting peace and cooper ation.
