

New mandate in Bihar reflects development

One thing has become clear from the Bihar assembly election results that the voter has now become aware and sensible. He examines every incident on the basis of merit and uses his opinion, now neither casteism nor communal politics is influential or dynastic. The issue of the development of the BJP and the leadership of Chief Minister Nitish Kumar, the veteran leader of the ruling coalition, has not proved to be as effective as the young leader of the opposition grand alliance, Mr. Tejasvi Yadav, who was expected by various exit polls. Because despite Tejasvi's effective performance, dynasty and the politics of the Bihar of the past continued to follow him, while Tejasvi tried his best to wash away these stains.

While the Bihar elections were important in many aspects, the results were even more shocking and gave new energy to democracy. Honest, stable and development-led selection was paramount for the voters of Bihar. People appeared in search of comparatively better leaders who could strengthen the path of development and employment for all.

It was thought that these elections in the Corona period would create some new political definitions, but the transition of politics in this country despite the transition has not changed much yet. An apprehension was expressed about the assembly elections of a large state like Bihar and the by-elections in several states that governments may have to bear public anger. But this did not happen; it means that the people appeared satisfied with the government's efforts to fight against the corona epidemic and the various challenges. This is the first election in the midst of the Corona epidemic in which the public's response is of great importance.

Shri Narendra Modi's election tours and political promises have helped to reduce the anti-incumbency among the people, but the BJP's success in the by-elections in Madhya Pradesh can be concluded that the voters want political stability in the state. Not only Madhya Pradesh but also Bihar, Gujarat and Uttar Pradesh, the public have given priority to stability and development.

The Congress and the Rashtriya Janata Dal Party once again played the dynastic trump card; it did not have the same effect as it was thought. In politics, power is not a property that is distributed among relatives, bequeathed. Many politicians of the country are engaged in creating a similar role for their family and sons and it also cast a shadow on the Bihar elections. Bihar elections have once again become a lesson in terms of denying the truth of dynasty in power.

How can the people who have been liberated after fighting the 'power of dynasty' forget it so soon? In some ways it is good that the importance of the dynasty tradition in politics is decreasing, being rejected. This hurts some people who want to redeem the role of family. But this is not good for the health of democracy. The public has now come to know that the king now comes out of the ballot box, not through anyone's stomach.

Now the time has come that all political parties should churn on the tragic truth of dynastic politics under the expectations of the people. One of the major reasons for Narendra Modi's magic and charismatic politics is the denial of dynastic politics. For this reason, the RJD has not been able to maintain its influence, which was expected from the election campaign of Tejashwi Babu. Jungle Raj of his party and Lalu-Rabri Raj was also a big reason behind this. But this big reality can be easily presented that the election results have not proved the way the opposition Grand Alliance wave was expected, but it has proved that the real player from the ruling coalition is BJP.

The emergence of the BJP as the largest party in the state also proved that the voters considered it important to give importance to the role of national parties in regional politics. At the same time, the performance of the National Party Congress should not be underestimated, it cannot be said to be sufficient to stop its declining credibility. Its percentage has increased in these elections, but the way the Left parties have performed in these elections has made many political observers. Only 29 seats out of 243 were given to these parties of the opposition grand alliance and they have been able to win more than half of the seats.

The emergence of leftist parties on the political scene has proved to be a dose and political life-energy for them. The realization of the presence of the left wing reveals the old political character of Bihar and points towards the changing political discourse in the changed times. Of course, the nationalist discourse of the BJP has been paramount for the voters in these elections, but its anti-extreme views have also come to the surface in these elections. Which shows that the voters are also getting ready for the ground issues raised in the elections, but the rise of the radical communal party Ittehadul Muslimeen in the area of Seemanchal has also raised alarm bells? The culture of Bihar is considered a symbol of communal harmony. The secular image of the state has been adversely affected by Mr. Owaisi's foothold in Bihar.

Looking at the way BJP's seats in the state have increased compared to previous elections and its ally Janata Dal (U)'s seats have decreased, it can be said that people's faith in the BJP is on national unity, empowerment of India and approval of development has to be accepted. It is also a message of inspiration to political parties to maintain their image, policies, political outlook and alliances. The way Chief Minister Nitish Kumar's image was reduced during the election campaign in the shadow of the Prime Minister's popularity, yet the result has come better and the anti-incumbency anger against ruling continuously for 15 years has come down.

Elections in Bihar have been fought on ground issues rather than on dreamy issues. Somewhere in these elections, the issue of good governance has also been working inside and this issue of good governance will be the priority of the new government. The newly formed government with issues of employment, education, health and development will remove the sufferings of a large population of the state dependent on agriculture, a large section of labourers and the poor, the result of these elections will become a means of empowering democracy. Because a positive aspect of these election results is clear that this time the voters of Bihar are going to give a strong opposition along with a stable government.

Tata Steel leads 'vocal for local' mission; to source complete domestic zinc requirement from Hindustan Zinc Mumbai : Country's top steel producer Tata Steel has taken a decisive step towards substitution of imported zinc for usage in its own units. The company has signed a Memorandum of Understanding to procure their complete domestic zinc requirements from Hindustan Zinc - India's largest and world's fifth largest zinc producer. This initiative would bolster the idea of Aatmanirbhar Bharat with one of the largest companies choosing to become vocal for local. The MoU is for the highest quantity to be ever signed by Hindustan Zinc and accounts for a quantity of around 45KT of zinc and other value-added metals. Under this MoU, Hindustan Zinc will cater to both Tata Steel & Tata Steel BSL (Earlier known as Bhushan Steel Limited, now a subsidiary of Tata Steel).

Commenting on the MoU, Arun Misra, CEO, Hindustan Zinc, said, "This MoU is a joint step by Tata Steel and Hindustan Zinc towards Aatmanirbhar Bharat. While Global technical experts deliver curated technical services for productivity and quality improvement, Vendor Managed Inventory will ensure significantly lower inventory costs across Tata Steel units. This is a first of its kind partnership in the non-ferrous metals industry and is reflective of our commitment to being value creators for our partners and towards nation-building."

Hindustan Zinc has implemented a vendor management inventory (VMI) solution for Tata Steel. As a first VMI customer, Tata Steel's inventory and stock will be closely monitored. Upon sensing a shortage on a real time basis, the material shall be delivered on impromptu basis from Hindustan Zinc warehouses with no risk to operation. Besides, Hindustan Zinc will also keep safety stock at all their depots across India for Tata Group Companies.

Lord Shiva statue "Statue of Belief", likely to be inaugurated by January

Udaipur: After the Statue of Unity in Gujarat, India has another high and magnificent statue almost ready to be inaugurated in January. This statue of Lord Shiva is at Ganesh Tekri, Nathdwara, and is 351 feet high and reportedly one of the tallest Shiva statues.

This magnificent structure is visible from a distance of 20 kms and is a jaw-dropping structure. The company from Gujarat making this structure has been given a deadline and there are all the probabilities that the statue will be inaugurated in January. Entry ticket will be required for visiting this place, though the ticket price has not yet been decided.

The work of the approach road, parking and adventure park for children is in the final stage. Necessary arrangements are being made for the programmes to be held for the inaugural function. Entering the structure will itself be quite an adventurous feel. The jal-abhishek can be performed from 351 feet for which 2 water holes have been made with a capacity of 5000 litres each. It has been informed that one of the water holes will be used for the purpose of fire-safety.

As of now, the 2 approach roads to the statue are of 30 and 40 feet respectively. A hall has been made inside the statue wherein tourists will be shown the entire process of the building of the statue from scratch via projector. A telescope will be placed at 250 feet inside so that tourists can take a look at far away distances and the Aravali ranges will also be visible from this point.

The area covered is 16 acres. The base of the statue is 110 feet high. 2600 tonnes of steel and 2601 tonnes of iron has been used for the statue. 26618 cubic metre cement-concrete have been used. The statue weighs 30 thousand tonnes. There are 3 herbal gardens in an area of 52,380 square feet. There is also a provision of open food court which will be able to accommodate around 400 people.

The design of the statue has been prepared by a senior professor of IIT Rourkee where complete care has been taken to keep it safe for 250 years. It has undergone wind-tunnel test in Australia. The statue can withstand the wind's velocity at 250 km/hr and is protected by rain and sun rays by a coating of zinc and is copper coloured.

The face of Lord Shiva which is 70 feet long depicts that he is under meditation. The entire structure is air-conditioned and has 4 lifts inside. 2 of the lifts can take 30 visitors at one time to a height of 110 feet, the other 2 are meant to take the people from 110 feet to 351 feet wherein 13 people can go at one time. 3 Separate staircases have been made for the people taking care of repair and maintenance. The 2-storeyed parking lot can accommodate 250 cars and 200 two-wheelers. A platform has also been made so that people can take selfies with the statue. A laser fountain has been made on 17,500 square feet area where 500 people can enjoy the musical fountain at one time. Terrace gardens have been made in front of the food court. Handicraft shops have also been set up which will have the special handicraft items from Nathdwara.
