Constitution is a sacred document with the balance of rights and duties - Governor

Active participation of the public is necessary for the strength of parliamentary democracy- Dr. Joshi

Campus expansion plans have been made for the up gradation of tribal students - Vice Chancellor

Udaipur: Chancellor and Governor Kalraj Mishra said that the Constitution of India is not a document but a culture itself. It explains our sublime Indian traditions. Our constitution is a sacred document balancing rights and duties.

Governor Kalraj Mishra was addressing a program organized on the occasion of Constitution Day on Friday after the inauguration of newly constructed Constitution Park, Main Gate and various buildings at Mohanlal Sukhadia University.

Governor Mishra said that the matter of public welfare has been said prominently in the Constitution because everyone's interest is in public welfare. Referring to the painting ration while underlining the Mahabharata, Ramayana and mythological stories. It is a reflection of our culture. Mishra said that our Constitution is a sacred document with a balance of rights and duties. Its preamble is the best among the preambles of all the constitutions of the world. The Governor said that everyone talks about rights and by misusing them, they try to spread anarchy. Such people are not aware of the duties. That is why after becoming the governor, I started reading the duties in public functions. The concept become the first University which has made Constitution Park in a short span of time. Duties have been mentioned in this, which can be read to inculcate the motivation in the mind of the students to discharge the duties along with the rights. To enable the students to carry out their duties. Congratulating the campus expansion of the University, he said that it is his best wishes that this University becomes a multi Faculty University and has earned its name in the world. He said that he would soon also come to the extended campus of Nimbahera. On the demand of Vidhan Sabha Speaker Dr CP Joshi to add Nathdwara to the TSP area, he said that he would soon talk to the officials in this regard, hold a meeting and would also visit these districts himself soon.

In the program, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly Dr CP Joshi said that parliamentary democracy is embedded in of diverse environment and diverse cultures in which the rights of all have been protected. That is the beauty of parliamentary democracy. He said that there should be active participation of the people in parliamentary democracy. People should not forget by voting for 5 years, but whoever they have voted for, whether they are doing the right thing or not, they should also have a full eye on it, only then democracy will be able to become strong. Dr Joshi said that many works were done for decentralization of power but on the basis of decentralization the authority could not reach the lower level. That is why this process has not fully met the aspirations of the people and that is why parliamentary democracy may not be as strong as we want to make. He said that there should be debate and discussion on every topic. The public should play the role of a watch dog, it should be kept an eye on whether the public representatives are working or not. If we take proper care of our duties along with our rights now, then parliamentary democracy will be strengthened. Dr Joshi again urged the Governor to give the benefit of TSP area to the tribals of Rajsamand district so that they can be connected in the mainstream and employment can be created for them. Dr Joshi said that there is no use in running skill training courses if they are not employable. We should focus on the most employable courses.

On this occasion, Cooperation Minister Udayalal Anjana said that the Vice Chancellor of the University is energetic and he has got the support of the Speaker of the Assembly. In such a situation, the university will continuously move towards progress. He hoped that the East Block Campus at Nimbahera would also be inaugurated soon.

Udaipur MP Arjun Meena said that I support the demand made by the Speaker to include the tribals of Rajsamand district in the TSP and if the state government sends a proposal in this regard, I would ask the Center to move forward and implement it. I will do my best to bring. The Vice Chancellor of the University, Professor Amarika Singh, while welcoming everyone, told about the achievements of the last one year. He said that 2 lakh students study in his university but students of tribal area are not getting benefits due to living in remote areas. They are deprived of education. For them, plans for campus expansion have been made. Prof Singh said that the Adivasi Milap scheme of the university is also a part of this. He said that talks are going on for mutual cooperation with many universities at international level. Whatever cooperation is available, first of all efforts will be made to reach it in the tribal area. ## Silver Plate

There are two separate things diamond and coal. One is beautiful to look at where as another one is ugly. One is demanded where as another one is not. One is kept so as to be seen every where, where as another one is kept as not to be seen anywhere. This shows how much humanity is misguided. Up to what extent human mind is misled. Actually both are same at the base but appear in different forms. This fact to be lured by the glimpse of glitter is very dangerous. We can well understand this reality by the story of Gautam Buddha and Sujata.

Gautam Buddha was sitting under a tree Bodhi vruksha lost in meditation. He had been sitting there since a long time when suddenly a village woman Sujata happened to pass by. She saw him. Out of pity and also shradha she prepared kheer for him and served him in a silver plate. The kheer might have been delicious but Gautam Buddha had no concern with taste. He consumed it and satisfied his hunger. Being a sanyasi he naturally had no attachment with that silver plate so after consuming kheer he threw it up into the running waters of a Niranjna river flowing near by. The lady was stunned to see it but now nothing could be done. No way was left to get that plate back.

But this incident suddenly changed her thought process. She understood that there was something bigger and more precious than this plate for a human being that's why it could be thrown so easily. Then why am I so much attached to this plate of silver? After all silver is only metal. Why should I waste this human life in mere small attachments? When this sanyasi can leave that grand palace full of gold, silver and other facilities then why are my trivial belongings so important to me? Shouldn't I also proceed further to get something bigger, something more precious? There after she became a disciple of Gautam Buddha. She realized that there is no time left to be wasted. So appreciate every moment of your life because one day you will wish you had more time.

Unlimited Freebies Threat to Democracy

In view of the upcoming assembly elections in Punjab, Aam Aadmi Party leader and Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal is putting all his might, making many announcements to cherish the voters, these days one such announcement remains the subject of discussion in which he announced that he has said that if his party forms the government, then every month Rs 1,000 will be deposited in the account of all women above 18 years of age in the state. Elderly women will get this amount in addition to old age pension. He may have linked this scheme with women empowerment, but it is a public-popular announcement that directly tempts the women of Punjab to vote in his favour.

Arvind Kejriwal, who has tried his luck in Indian politics by sounding the bugle against corruption, has become famous by distributing charities and announcing free facilities. By the way, the culture of distributing freebies is increasing in every party. In a democracy, such absurd and exaggerated declarations and assurances pollute politics, which is not only fatal but also indicates a great anomaly. Any ruling party is given the responsibility not to loot the hard earned money of the people, but to use it in public interest and developmental works. Only by discharging this responsibility properly, any ruling party or its leader can remain capable of power.

This announcement of Kejriwal raises many questions. Does such a declaration constitute any kind of fundamental development? Isn't this a violation of the basic spirit of democracy? Is such a declaration expected in a prosperous province like Punjab? How many such women are really in need of such an amount?

The question is also why the 18-year limits? Why should girls in the age group of one to 18 years be discriminated against in any public welfare scheme? Because they don't have the right to vote? How long will the trend of distributing such unnecessary rewards in election manifestos last? It has become necessary to find answers to these questions because forgetting development, all political parties are now engaged in distributing such rewards and cultivating free culture.

What kind of democratic framework is being created in which parties have gone beyond their limits to make populist promises, it cannot be said in any way in public interest. Unaccountable populist announcements and unfulfilled assurances may bring immediate benefits to the parties, but are also likely to adversely affect the long-term social and economic condition of the country. This has led to the crippling of development plans and the mentality of freebies has started spreading among the people. The question is, how can political parties and politicians be so irresponsible and selfish under the influence of power?

The question is whether public resources should be made available to anyone absolutely free of cost? Do governments have the right to spend public money as they please? When governments are not in a financially comfortable position. This trend is not only motivated by political gain, but also covers institutional failure, and cannot be confined to a single party or government. Some governments, by running a campaign, spend crores of rupees of the hard earned money of the common man in telling how they have made the country shine. The educated unemployed considered this kind of bigotry and free culture as an insult. Many times governments do not have enough resources to save their people from calamities like lack of people, hunger, unemployment, pollution. But when they do not have money to solve these basic public problems, how do they distribute the facilities for free? Why do crores and billions of rupees are spent in their promotion?

In South India, especially from Tamil Nadu, this free distribution tradition now dominates almost the entire nation. Keeping the economy and the financial condition of the state at bay, almost all the parties and governments have distributed or promised to distribute from ornaments, laptops, mangal sutras, TVs, smartphones to rice, milk, ghee. This is the height of freebies. Free medicine, free test, almost free ration, free education, free marriage, free land lease, free house building money, child birth money, no child birth (sterilization), free school food, free Electricity Rs 200 a month, free pilgrimage, free water. Everything is free from birth till death. There is a competition to distribute freebies, then why would anyone work? How will the country develop with the culture of free distribution?

From the last ten years to the next twenty years, such a whole generation is being created or our leaders are creating a generation which will completely depend on free culture. If you ask them to work, they will abuse and say, what is the government doing?

The limits of irony and inconsistency are being crossed. No party gives these freebies and donations from its own funds. They use taxpayers' money. We are creating 'parasites not citizens'. How long will the taxpayer minority of the country take care of the majority society for free? When this economic equation will spread, then this free culture generation will be twenty thirty years old. One who has never eaten hard-earned bread in life, he will always eat it for free. If not found, this generation will become Naxalite, become extremist, but will not be able to work. What kind of society are they creating? What kind of anomalous politics is this? There is a need to think seriously.

Certainly the poor women of Punjab will benefit from such a scheme, but the question is, are all the poor women in Punjab? Then what is Kejriwal trying to convey by providing such assistance to rich and prosperous women? As the promise of free electricity and 20 thousand litres of water to every family in Delhi every month up to 200 units has stalled the development of Delhi? Roads are broken; no new development plan has come out. Despite such conditions, the Aam Aadmi Party has achieved resounding success in two consecutive elections. But he has also started such a tradition that inspired by it, political parties of those states have started competing to promise free facilities to a ridiculous level, which are economically counted diseased states.

In the present era, the spark of lust for power has been ignited so much, politics are crippling the people and the system is going on for the taste of power. The primary responsibilities of social reform, employment, creation of new enterprises, promotion of agriculture, revival of rural life have been absent from the books of political parties, all political parties have gathered in the effort to make their hands yellow without applying mehndi. Instead of saving the public from the addiction of freebies, they are trying to straighten their political desires by catching them. In a democracy, making people negative, lazy, greedy, indolent, lunge, is it an example of political doers? Has your own interest and selfishness become omnipresent?

In fact, through free means, we will give birth to a society which will be dependent and dormant without becoming productive and this will have a direct impact on both the ecology and progress of the country. The question arises that how long will we continue to support this immoral politics? The first responsibility to curb this is on us people. In a healthy and ideal democracy, the first responsibility of governments is to implement such schemes, which can lead to all-round development.
