

The plantation is not a formality but a law, Dr. Narendra Singh Rathore

Udaipur: The plantation is not a formality, it is a law. AS

THE CHIEF GUEST, Vc NS Rathore spoke these words during the intensive tree plantation program organized by the National Service Planning Unit on World Nature Conservation Day.

He presented an explanatory comment describing the tree plantation as a law. You told L means land, A means air, and W means water and said that without them, nature is incomplete. While appealing to everyone, he said that how much nature gives us, it is our great responsibility that we should try to repay nature by returning it as much as possible. Let us pledge that we will not only protect the country's natural resources but also make better use of them in the country's progress.

Special guest Dr. P.K. Singh, Dean, College of Technology and Technology, while expressing his views, said that today, many trees are cut by the people for the construction of roads, houses, manufacturing plants, etc. Trees perform essential functions in nature. They clean the air and supply oxygen. Planting trees will not only compensate for their loss but will also benefit the Earth. Trees are the life support network of the Earth. They support and are essential to life on Earth. Apart from giving oxygen, plants also serve as general protection against noise pollution.

Describing the program's relevance, Dean Dr. Meenu Srivastava said that tree plantation is one of the best activities to make the earth green, vibrant and healthy. Planted trees help our biodiversity, ensure oxygen supply for the next generations and provide us with various resources. Without trees, the existence of human life and other species on Earth is impossible. So we should plant more and more trees.

Coordinator and in-charge Dr. Prakash Panwar, Head of Department, Extension Education, and Communication Management, said that a total of 100 saplings were planted, in which Kadamba, Molishree, Neem, Ashok, Jamun, Mango, and Guava are prominent. Efforts will be made to continue the series of this noble work in the future also.

Successful treatment of neonatal severe diaphragmatic hernia in Geetanjali Hospital

Udaipur: The Neonatal and Pediatric Department of Geetanjali Medical College and Hospital, Udaipur, is equipped with all world-class facilities. Here the complex operation and treatment of babies are being done continuously. Due to the tireless efforts of Pediatric Surgeon Dr. Nilesh Tank, Head of the Department of Pediatrics, Dr. Devendra Sareen, Dr. Hitendra Rao, and their team, the diaphragmatic hernia of a newborn born in Sirohi was successfully treated and given a healthy life. The newborn born in Sirohi started having difficulty breathing immediately after birth and could not even drink mother's milk. In such a situation, the newborn was immediately brought to the emergency of Geetanjali Hospital. Pediatric surgeon Dr. Nilesh Tank examined the newborn, in which it was found that the veil between the chest and abdomen of the child was not formed, which is called a "diaphragmatic hernia." Due to this, all the abdominal organs had gone to the chest, and the lungs were not even developed. The child was admitted and put on oxygen, and the subsequent operation was planned. During the process, it was found that the veil on the left side of the child was not born at all, due to which the liver, spleen, small intestine, large intestine, and esophagus had all gone inside the chest, which was again inserted into the stomach and the veil was made. After the operation, the newborn was kept on the ventilator machine for eight days. After the condition improved, the newborn's oxygen was removed, and weaning started. After 14 days, the newborn was cured and discharged from the hospital.

Successful treatment of cerebral artery by ballooning by angiography

Udaipur: Doctors of the Department of Neurology, Pacific Medical College and Hospital, Bhiwon ka Bedla, gave new life to a 55-year-old patient by successful angiography of ballooning of the brain's arteries.

55-year-old patients brought to PMCH suffering from severe headache, vomiting problems, and in a state of unconsciousness. In the initial examination of the patient, the team of Senior Neurologist Dr. Atulabh Bajpayee got the CT scan done.

In the investigation, a brain hemorrhage (was found in the patient's brain. To find out the cause of bleeding in the patient's brain, brain angiography was done in which five aneurysms were found in the blood arteries of the brain in different parts of the patient's brain, which could cause the patient to become paralyzed again in the future.

To save the patient from future paralysis and to reduce the effect of the present paralysis, all the balloons were closed by coiling the aneurysm by interventional technique without open brain surgery so that the patient could be re-current brain blood in the future by arterial balloons from bursting.

Dr. Vajpayee said that till now, he had done many cases of aneurysm coiling during his tenure, but such cases are rarely seen. As Dr. Atulabh Bajpayee said, such patients are found in only one or two out of 1000, in which 5 small balloons are located in the blood arteries of the brain. In such a situation, coiling is the only suitable treatment to cure the patient with less bleeding and quick recovery. After coiling, the patient is currently acceptable and can do his daily activities regularly.
