

DM flagged off JK Lakshmi's animal health chariot

Udaipur: District Collector Tarachand Meena flagged off JK Lakshmi's animal health chariot on the collectorate premises for awareness among the villagers.

In a function organized in the Collectorate, the District formal Collector said that humans could understand each other's pain while ill. Still, animals cannot tell their illness to anyone. In such a situation, this Arogya Rath will prove to be very helpful.

Appreciating the work done by JK Lakshmi for the animals in Lumpy Skin Disease cases, he said that the the company should use 25 percent of its C.S.R. fund in association with the district administration so that the suffering and needy can be benefited on a large scale.

Cattle farmers will get more benefits from improved varieties of breeding. The areas of the district where the company works for the animals and animal herders will benefit more. On this occasion, he urged the company to provide an ambulance or a mobile van to treat animals. Earlier, the company's C.E.O., Naveen Kumar Sharma, said that J.K. C.S.R. activities had been a part of the company's business since its inception. Considering animal wealth as a considerable wealth, the company is starting new work for them. It is the duty of all of us to serve the animals. Company's C.S.R. Head Sanjeev Jha said at the function that JK Lakshmi Company is working on education, health, employment, and rural development, and more than 3 lakh people are getting benefited from it. The company will work for livestock and animal promotion in every state. The company has selected 60 villages whose population is more than 2 thousand for this work. Dr. Ravi Yadav of J.K. Trust said that, on average, a cow in India gives 3 liters of milk per day, while it is 16 liters in Australia. To increase it, we have to pay attention to breeding. In C.S.R., the intent is needed, not quantum.

N.S.S. celebrated "Farmer's Day" and organized an online seminar

Udaipur: The Unit of National Service Scheme of Agriculture College celebrated 'Farmer's Day' by planting saplings on the birthday of Chaudhary Charan Singh, the fifth Prime Minister of India.

On this occasion, the dean of the college, Dr. Dilip Singh, told the students that Singh was a son of the soil who, by implementing several schemes for the benefit of the farmers, contributed to the manifold increase in food production and reached this Position by setting an example of respect for the farmers.

B.N. University President

Prof. NB Singh said that the farmer is the driving force of the nation's overall social and economic development.

the country's economy and deserves to be honored. The purpose of this day is to promote awareness about the importance of farmers and their valuable contribution to

N. s. s. In-charge Dr. PS Rao said that on this day, we have to take this oath that as a lifelong agriculture student, we will contribute to the service of farmers with our body, mind, and wealth. Agriculture College Subcommittee Chairman Devendra Singh Piplaj said that the national economy and the citizens of India are heavily dependent on the farmers to maintain the development of the country.

On this occasion, an online seminar was also organized by Dr. Kamal Singh Rathore on behalf of the University, in which many agricultural experts from different states of Bihar, Jharkhand, Maharashtra, and Karnataka participated. In which Dr. Jitendra Kumar Singh Neemdihi, Dr. Abhay Nath

Singh, Dr. Shriram Singh, Dr. Om Prakash Ji Mishra, Dr. Aniket, Dr. PS Rao and Dr. Swapnil Bharti shared their views. It was urged that maximum respect should be given to the farmers, it should be given the status of industry to turn the youth towards agriculture, more technology should be used in agriculture, and attention should be paid to the productivity of coarse grains and fertilizer of the soil. Modern chemical fertilizers should not destroy power; more and more organic fertilizers and animals should be included in agriculture again.

If the farmer is happy, then the country will be satisfied. The year 2023 has been declared the year of coarse grains by the United Nations; coarse grains such as maize, millet, barley, ragi, china, etc., have been used in India for centuries, which are also beneficial from the point of view of health.

There will be various events related to agriculture in the centenary year celebration programs of the institute.

On this occasion, Assistant Professor Dr. Hina Sahiwala, Dr. Bhavna Goswami, and Mr. Rajendrasinh Jhala & students also planted.

This beautiful life

This beautiful life
Is actually a mystery
As we all know it's unpredictable
So enjoy it's every small victory
It's time to stop worrying
And move forward in life without fear
Enjoy it's each moment
Live your life without a tear
Hey, if you discover the true essence of life,
Then in full faith you must strive...
Just be courageous and forge ahead,
And try to realise the ultimate goal of life
