

Justice After 8 Years: A Landmark Victory for Contractual Employee Parin Rawal Sets a Powerful Precedent for Millions Across India

Udaipur: After an arduous legal battle spanning eight years, justice has finally been delivered to Parin Rawal, a contractual MIS Manager at the Zila Parishad in Udaipur. In a historic judgment, the Hon'ble Supreme Court of India dismissed the Rajasthan Government's appeal and upheld the 2018 verdict of the Rajasthan High Court, Jodhpur, which had ruled in favor of equal pay for Rawal.

Background of the Case

In 2018, Parin Rawal had approached the Rajasthan High Court with a civil writ petition asserting that his duties as a contractual MIS Manager were equivalent to those of a regular government Programmer. Yet, despite the identical workload and responsibilities, he was being paid significantly less. Advocate Ramesh Prajapat represented Rawal, and Hon'ble Justice Arun Bhansali ruled in his favor, reinforcing the legal doctrine of "Equal Pay for Equal Work."

State Government's Legal Challenge

Unwilling to accept the verdict, the Rajasthan Government appealed the decision before a division bench of the Rajasthan High Court. However, Chief Justice Indrajit Mahanty and Justice Sandeep Mehta dismissed the state's appeal and directed compliance with the original order.

The state government then escalated the case to the Supreme Court, filing Rajasthan Government vs. Parin Rawal.

Supreme Court's Final Ruling

Advocates Rahul Trivedi and Prabodh Kumar robustly represented Parin Rawal before the Hon'ble Supreme Court bench comprising Justice Pamiidhantam Sri Narasimha and Justice

Jaymalya Bagchi. The apex court dismissed the state's appeal, reaffirming the High Court's earlier decision.

This final ruling not only brings closure to an eight-year legal ordeal for Rawal but also marks a pivotal victory in the fight for the rights of contractual employees.

A Ray of Hope for Contractual Workers Nationwide

The Supreme Court's decision sends a strong and clear message: contractual employees performing the same duties as regular staff are entitled to equal pay.

Now, it is the responsibility of the Rajasthan Government to implement the High Court's order dated 14.11.2018 and ensure that Parin Rawal receives salary benefits equivalent to that of a Programmer.

This judgment has sparked a wave of hope and celebration among contractual workers not just in Rajasthan but across the nation. It sets an inspiring example for the millions who continue to face wage disparities despite carrying out equivalent responsibilities as permanent government employees.

Parin Rawal's victory is not just personal – it is a milestone in India's ongoing struggle for labor equity and constitutional justice.

Fourth Ravindra Nath Vyas Lecture Held

Udaipur: The fourth Prof. Ravindra Nath Vyas Memorial Lecture and film screening took place on Friday at the Vignyan Samiti auditorium in Ashok Nagar. Organized in memory of Prof. Vyas, former Dean of the Faculty of Arts at Mohanlal Sukhadia University, the event welcomed noted journalist and filmmaker Avinash Das as the chief guest.

In his keynote address, Das underscored the role of cinema in voicing societal concerns despite increasing corporate and market pressures. He warned that if cinema ceases to reflect the times, it risks losing its essence. Highlighting the lack of representation of Dalits in mainstream Hindi cinema, Das pointed out the contrast with literature, which has engaged deeply with marginalized voices.

Guest speaker Dr. Laeq Hussain, Director of Bhartiya Lok Kala Mandal, emphasized the transformative power of theatre and cinema in tackling life's challenges. "An artist's work speaks louder than words," he said.

Presiding guest Dr. R.M. Lodha paid tribute to Prof. Vyas's distinguished academic career and his impactful roles post-retirement, including as Research Dean at Janardan Rai Nagar Rajasthan Vidyapeeth and a professor in Malaysia.

Shankar Lal Chaudhary, Chair of the Memorial Committee, highlighted Vyas's influential presence in Udaipur's academic, cultural, and political spheres. His daughter, Dr. Iti Vyas, shared personal memories, offering a glimpse into his lesser-known traits.

A book titled SamajwadkeSaarthi by Himmat Seth was released. The program began with a poetry recitation by Ashok Jain Manthan, followed by the film In Galiyon Mein. Prof. Hemendra Chandalia conducted the event, and Dr. Chandra Dev Ola offered the vote of thanks.

Mock Air Strike Triggers Alert at Sangam University

Bhilwara: Panic gripped Sangam University when an

"air strike" alert was raised on campus. According to the pre-planned mock drill, news of fire and multiple injuries due to suffocation quickly spread following the simulated attack. In response, emergency teams comprising university officials, NCC cadets, NSS volunteers, and staff swiftly rushed to the scene.

However, it was soon clarified that the event was not an actual attack, but a mock drill organized under the guidance of the central and state governments, district administration, and NCC-NSS departments. The drill was systematically executed by Sangam University in collaboration with NCC and NSS to assess emergency preparedness, inter-departmental coordination, and rapid response efficiency.

Lt. Rajkumar Jain, coordinator of the drill, explained that the scenario depicted a strike at the university's central lawn, resulting in a fire and injuries to 5–10 individuals. NCC cadets, NSS volunteers, and nursing staff led the rescue operations. The site was cordoned off, and a firefighting team comprising students demonstrated fire control measures. Simultaneously, injured individuals were provided first aid and mock-evacuated to the hospital. Training sessions on first aid, CPR, and emergency safety protocols were also conducted.

The drill ensured that all students, faculty, and staff were educated on safe evacuation and response during fire and other emergencies. The fire safety and applied health sciences departments of the university extended full support to the drill.

Following the exercise, a review meeting was held by the university administration, gathering feedback from all departments and seeking suggestions for improved emergency management. Vice Chancellor Prof. Karunesh Saxena stated that such drills are crucial for minimizing casualties during real emergencies and serve as a reliable test of resources and technical readiness. Pro-Vice Chancellor Prof. Manas Ranjan Panigrahi noted that the drill proved effective inter-departmental coordination is achievable in emergency scenarios.

Dr. Mahima Birla Secures Three Copyrights in Management Innovation

Ahmedabad: Demonstrating her deep-rooted expertise in management education and industry-oriented research, Dr. Mahima Birla, Director of Narayana Business School and Head of its Internal Quality Assurance Cell (IQAC), has successfully published three significant copyrights in the field of management studies. These original works have been formally registered and approved by the Copyright Office under the Controller General of Patents, Designs and Trademarks, Government of India.

The most recent addition to her academic contributions is the 2024 copyright titled "Optimizing Manufacturing Gemba and 5S in Nagpur Textile Business." This work presents an in-depth micro case study focused on enhancing manufacturing processes using the Gemba and 5S techniques, specifically tailored to the textile industry in Nagpur. It offers practical insights and solutions for industry professionals aiming to streamline operations and improve workplace efficiency in traditional textile sectors.

Dr. Birla's copyrighted works are considered valuable educational tools, particularly in management education, where they serve as micro case studies providing real-world perspectives. These tools not only deepen academic understanding but also help in skill development by offering students hands-on exposure to industry intricacies.

Before this recent achievement, Dr. Birla had already secured two copyrights in 2022. The first, "Catering and Food Management Solution," presents innovative methods for improving food services and catering operations. The second, "Jewelry Production Process Improvement Techniques," focuses on refining production workflows within the jewelry industry, highlighting practical techniques for enhanced productivity and quality control.

All three works were developed in collaboration with other scholars and domain experts across India, reflecting a spirit of academic cooperation and interdisciplinary research. Dr. Birla's consistent contributions underscore her commitment to bridging the gap between theoretical education and industrial application, making a lasting impact on the academic and professional management community.

These copyrighted micro case studies are now part of the national repository of intellectual property and are expected to be widely used across business schools and professional institutions as reference material for teaching and research.
